Who guards the bodyguard? The ethics of care for older adults

In this essay, a cultural anthropologist looks at the help given to a Tong, a resident at Dakota who is being resented, and reflects on what the case says about the way help is given to the elderly and the poor in Singapore.

THE ECONOMY OF GESTALTICS, THINGS AND PROGRAMMES

Care must be exercised to ensure that the benefits and burdens that arise from the establishment of a gestaltic framework are not distributed among those who benefit from the system. In the specific case of care, the benefits of care are not automatically distributed among all those who provide care. In fact, the benefits of care are often distributed among those who are able to provide care. This is because the benefits of care are often distributed among those who are able to provide care.

AGENCIES IN PLACE WITH SIMONY

The agencies in place with simony are those that are established to provide care. These agencies are established to provide care to those who benefit from the system. In the specific case of care, the agencies in place with simony are those that are established to provide care to those who benefit from the system. The agencies in place with simony are those that are established to provide care to those who benefit from the system.

The agencies in place with simony are those that are established to provide care. These agencies are established to provide care to those who benefit from the system. In the specific case of care, the agencies in place with simony are those that are established to provide care to those who benefit from the system.